THANKSGIVING DAY.

Hail, hail, Thanksgiving day!
Welcome to saints and sinners—
Welcome to all, both great and small,
Thou day of royal dinners!
See how they come from far and near,
A troop of "carpet-baggers,"
To grace the board with one accord,
And appetites like daggers.

Who cares for Turkish war about?
Who cares for serf or Czar?
Our Turkey lies before our eyes;
Come and attack—hurrah!
With knife and fork we win the day,
A truce to care and sorrow!
Eat while we may, Thanksgiving day
Will fade before to-morrow.

We're thankful for a host of things
Too numerous to mention;
For sweethearts true and hearts to woo,
And a few things worth attention.
For all and everything that gives
Our lives so much of pleasure,
We offer thanks. Long may we taste
Thine overflowing measure!

Then hail, hail, Thanksgiving day!
Thou day of royal dinners!
Nor will we care if the grim nightmare
Should fright the soul within us
When day is done. Let Turkey's ghost,
With the nuts and puddings and wine,
In the dead of night begin their fight,
Still—victory is thine!

—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine for December.

TWO THIEVES.

One stole of gold a rich man's mite;
The good name, one, a poor girl bore.
One stole in fear, at dead of night;
One spoke a word—the deed was o'er.

One took a part; and one took all.
One left enough for life and joy;
One left but weeping, and the pall
Of more than death o'er all employ.

One expiates in chains his sin,
And stolen gold for him has bought a
Thick prison walls to close him in,
And scorn of men and bitter thought.

And one who stole so much, a name,
Beyond the worth of life or gold,
Is free and courted, and the fame
Of his dark deed is never told.

FABLE OF THE ASS AND THE LION.

A famous Lion having invited his friends to a feast, and not being able to catch any food, called to his cave a fat ass, and said, "Sweet creature, thy siren voice can entice and charm the beasts of the field. Wilt pipe a duet note?" The jackass, thus flattered, sang his best, and the deer, rabbits, and wild fowl, terrified by the hubbaboo, ran to the cave to see what was the matter. And the Lion good-fed them all. Then the jackass stopped singing and remarked: "See here, this doesn't pay; you get all the fodder." And the Lion replied, "Music and Virtue are their own reward. 'Tis an honor to be permitted to serve me. Skip away, sweet Nightingale. Whoop'er up again!" But the jackass suddenly refused and departed thence, much ashamed, and hid his head in a Bush. And the Lion took the dainty Provisions by the hind legs and flung them to the butler, saying, "There's Peter Cooper; there's Hamilton Fish; there's Phelps; there's Astor. Who'd a thought they'd a voted for me?" And the jackass, whose fame was spread with "N. Y. Republican Press," turned his ears around to the wind, and he heard the Lion roar, "Mayeyergame, gen'men! Mayeyergame!"—N. Y. Graphic.

FIREMEN VS. CHINAMEN.

Nothing angers the average fireman so much as seeing a Chinaman working for his living, so it is not to be wondered at that on the road between San Rafael and Sausalito laborers out of work got very irate last week at seeing a gang of Chinamen building a kiln of about 800,000 newly-made bricks. Fired with desperation the McGratis and O'Rooneys determined to ruin the invading Mongolian. "It's building a brick house and carrying a hod, the dairty haythers are," cried Miles McGinnis; "and by-yes, we'll be after burning that same house down to-night if it's a night we work." They noticed that there were several interstices in the layers of the bricks, especially near the ground, and the immigrants from County Cork resolved to burn the entire structure to the ground. They accordingly passed the following night in hauling wood from the foothills, which they inserted under the bricks and ignited. The astute heathens were slightly surprised at finding the kiln perfect next morning, but they smiled that indigenous Tartar grin, pocketed their coin, and murmured, "Melican man heap good to Chinaman—Chin Foo a same."—San Francisco News-Letter.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

The creation of postal savings banks is proposed by Mr. Phillips, of Kansas, who has brought in a bill to the House on the subject. He proposes that at each office where the postmaster's salary is $1,000, a savings bank shall be established on application, and deposits shall be received at as low an amount as 25 cents; the account not to exceed $200. It provides that when $25 is deposited it shall bear interest at 5 per cent. when placed subject to a ninety days' notice before call. It authorizes the issue of $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, and $200, with coupons payable every three months, which, on demand, shall be payable on amounts deposited when called. It provides for additional bonds for postoffices where such bank are established, and that the bonds may be increased from time to time. It makes the execution of the provisions of the act devolve on the Postmaster-General. The Secretary of the Treasury will issue the bonds on the application of the Postmaster-General, which will be [illegible] in the name of the [illegible] in trust for the depositors in the postal savings bank [illegible] Postmaster-General [illegible] account therefor.

NEW CABINET MINISTER.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Windom, of Minnesota, providing for the creation of a Department of Commerce, whose head shall have a seat in the cabinet, and is sure to pass sometime. Its passage may not occur at this session of Congress, but it is inevitable in the near future. The great interests of this country are not war, a navy, public lands and Indians, but commerce, manufactures, agriculture, labor and transportation. We have no secretary to attend to these great interests, but three cabinet officers to overlook the minor ones. Opinions are divided as to the advisability of maintaining an efficient army and navy, but there can be no two opinions as to the need of opening new fields for our manufactures, and fostering and extending our industries of all kinds. With growth in population and wealth will come a government of more variety and extensive powers. Ex-Governor Tilden and those who followed his lead will doubtless oppose any attempt to bring the government up to the needs of the times. But the government will, nevertheless, take on new functions, and it is not at all unlikely that the Democrats themselves may go much farther than the Republicans in giving effect by legislation to this tendency. Party programme, before obtaining office, has been so often reversed in party performance in office that one ceases to wonder at the transformation and looks at it as in a way inevitable. Democrats who outdo progress a faith in "no government" while out of office, might, if the nation entrusted them with the cares of state, find that a theory of that kind was very inconvenient in practice, and might, like new converts, rush to the other extreme and give us what we have asked in vain from those who theoretically believe in government—an efficient administration and an executive authority suited to our present wants.—N. Y. Graphic.

EVERGREENS.

Within the last twenty-five years evergreens have great[illegible] multiplied, during which time many new varieties have been introduced. Nurserymen have learned to propagate them cheaply and in such manner that they may be transplanted with certainty, so that they are within the reach of all who have grounds on which to plant them, and with taste and usefulness. Now one cannot travel far through the country without finding here and there fine displays of them adorning and sheltering the homesteads of the farms as well as the urban and suburban dwellings.

Some ten years ago the writer purchased of a nurseryman at Detroit 1,000 little white cedars, the arbor vitæ; the plants were one year old from the seed, about six inches high, and cost 1½ cents each—$15 per 1,000. Besides planting many of them in groups or single about the house and grounds, a sufficient number were used to make a hedge or screen on the westerly and northerly sides of a large garden which had been much exposed to the sweep of blasting winds, sometimes to the destruction of nearly all the early plants that it contained. These cedars, set two or three feet apart, all grew luxuriantly, and they now form a living wall about 12 feet high, as impervious to the winds as if built of brick or stone, affording a complete protection to the garden, and more than doubling its value for the purposes of its use. Delicate plants, that one blast of cold wind on a May morning would chill and destroy, now, no matter how bleak the gusty day, seem to nestle in the warm sunshine, unconscious of harm.

This is a cheaply obtained refuge that one may profit by, and inexpensive ornamentation in which one may indulge.

It is not likely that many will live to see the day, yet we believe it is not very far distant when there will be no fences except those provided to keep animals away from the fields, rather than to confine them in them. Farmers themselves, severely as they feel the weight of their expenses for fences, are as a rule unaware of the enormous burden of them, and how much it costs to perpetuate the incumbrance. If to the westward and northward of each farmer's farm and cattle yards a belt of evergreens was planted, they would in ten years form as complete a protection as a stone wall fifteen feet high, and be better every way, affording a sheltering place from the winds that sweet-breathed cows and oxen and gentle sheep would regard as a special providence, and for which they would repay their owners many fold. Belts of evergreens planted on the exposed sides of orchards afford such a sheltering place from the winds that trees so protected have been observed to be fruitful when others in bleak situations have utterly failed. When these truths shall be duly appreciated, and the further truth that every three acres will sustain as much stock in the yard as five acres will in the field, then farmers will begin to inquire if fences cannot be dispensed with; and when they shall realize how destructive to crops it is to let the winds go wholly at large, then they will begin not only to decorate and adorn their homes and gardens with evergreens, but will extend them along the highways and make hedgerows of them between all neighboring possessions and property.

The wealth represented as a dinner given by George W. Childs, at his villa on Long Branch a few days ago, amounts to over $100,000,000. From [illegible] be inferred that we were present, [illegible] owing to circumstances over which, etc., we could not [illegible]—Exchange.

ADVERTISING.

Of late years there has been a wonderful change of feeling on the subject of advertising. Business men in great numbers are learning that they may do business in a garret and yet have a list of customers that numbers many thousands, and from every section of the country. It is but a short time since that the writer received a letter from a business firm in Cincinnati, who said they had a lot preserved of some 200,000 letters which had come to them in response to advertising, during not more than a year's time preceding the case of writing. And this is not the only case of which I have knowledge where a large correspondence has been opened with parties from all sections—even, too, where the advertising had been maintained in but few papers.—St. Louis Merchant.

A TENDER-HEARTED BROTHER.

A couple of enterprising men, engaged in the clothing business, are interviewed by a customer in search of a coat. The senior of the firm handles the new-comer, and soon finds a "first-class fit." In answer as to the price the response is, "Two dun'ten." "We, sir, like your coat very much, but do not like the price." "Vell, my frent, ze price is nothing so you like ze coat. We let you take 'em at two without the ten." The customer still complains of the price, saying that two was too much. This was too heavy for the dealer, so, taking his customer to the extreme end of the store, and drawing him into a dark corner, he whispered in his ear, "Mine frent, I let you have zat coat for thirty shillings." "We, sir," said the customer, "I like your coat very much, and am satisfied with the price, yet I'd like to know why this mysterious performance." "Vell, my frent, you see that is de man here? He was mine brodder. He got ze heart disease, and so help me gracious, if he vas so near me to you I had taken thirty-two for zat coat, he drop dead on ze floor."

THE PAPER COLLAR MAN.

A man who had paper collars for sale was haranguing a crowd on the Esplanade the other night, as follows: "Here, gentlemen, are the champion paper collars of the globe, unequaled for style, duration, and finish, although it takes a long time to make a finish of one. You can wear it a week, turn it and wear it another week, so it is, and so if you have two more collars. And when I think of the oceans of beer that will annually trickle down through these collars, I feel like a brewery. Everybody should wear these collars; no one can keep house without them. They promote longevity and restore gray hair to its original color. They improve the complexion, purify the blood, and will force a beard or moustache upon the smoothest face in six days. They strengthen the appetite and will remove tan, freckles, corns and bunions. They will cure the straightest hair in ten minutes. Every woman should buy a box for her husband; they will collar a man in the club room, billiard hall, political caucus or free lunch, regularly and promptly at 9 o'clock p. m., and drag him home. A man can't swear with one of them on. Business men should make their office boys wear them, as they are infallible and absolute preventives of whistling. Hotel keepers should buy them, as they won't get the wearer eat too much. They are warranted to cure tooth-ache of three years' standing, neuralgia, rheumatism, broken heart, prairie mange, consumption, dyspepsia and blind "staggers."—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

THE SILVER BILL.

The Finance Committee of the Senate has reported the silver bill without amendment, the dispatches say, excepting that adopted on motion of Mr Allison, providing for the purchase and coining of bullion to the amount of not less than $2 000 000, and not more than $4,000,000 per month. We were under the impression that the clause known as the free coinage clause had been stricken out of the Bland bill, but it appears that the slight modification indicated above was the only one made. The Senate will probably change this feature of the bill, which will render it less objectionable to that body as well as to the President. In the Finance Committee the amendments offered to limit the amount of silver to be a legal tender to $5, $10, $25, and $50, were voted down by a vote of four to three, the other two members of the committee being paired Of course the enemies of the silver bill will endeavor to defeat it in the Senate by endeavoring to overload it with amendments with the view of delaying its passage. We feel quite confident, however, that the bill will become a law, and regard it as a great aid to the resumption act, which may safely be allowed to remain upon our statute books if the silver bill be passed. We have felt more than usual interest in the bill in question because we believe that its passage will greatly benefit the whole country, as well as promote the mining interests of the Rocky Mountain region, where the precious metals are produced. It would doubtless have been better had the free coinage clause been omitted from the original bill, as it will probably be stricken out in the Senate, and this change will cause further delay.

As the bill now stands, all the obligations of the government now made payable in coin can be paid in silver as well as in gold, except the new government bonds, which have been issued since the demonetization of silver [illegible] Whatever may be the wording of the bill, it would be manifestly unjust to the [illegible] creditor, or interest, in any

MUSIC IN COLORADO SPRINGS.

The following is an extract from a communication signed by E. J. Lake, which appears in this week's Mountaineer It reveals a bit of unpublished history of the early settlement of this town which should make those of our citizens who were here at that time blush clean up to their ears —

A few years ago this city was the rendezvous of a class of people who cared little or nothing for music, except, perhaps, that of the simplest and lowest order—and there are no doubt many such now, and to them these words are not addressed But a more cultivated society is now being formed, which are like minded with us who have lately come from places older, and offering more opportunities for indulging this taste

We turned this matter over to our astrologer, General Nathan Harris, who, after a careful horoscope, predicts that the same thing will happen again in just 7,000 years.

SENATOR CHAFFEE AND THE FREIGHT QUESTION.

The speech of Senator Chaffee on the question of compelling the Union Pacific Railroad to pro rate with the Denver Pacific and Kansas Pacific roads was an able one Everything that could be said in favor of this just measure was well said by Mr Chaffee, and if he succeeds in the crusade he has undertaken against the Union Pacific he will be entitled to the thanks of every one of his constituents Those who have lived for any length of time in Colorado have perceived the incalculable injury that has been done to the State by the refusal of the latter road to comply with the plain requirements of the law Comparatively few of the thousands of tourists from the East and from Europe who visit the Pacific coast, do so by way of Colorado, for the reason that the expense of the trip is so largely increased thereby, to say nothing of the vexatious delays, and other inconveniences imposed by the Union Pacific monopoly in order to compel all travelers to patronize its road throughout its whole length As Colorado Springs invariably gets its full share of the travel that comes to the State our people are vitally interested in the success of Mr Chaffee's efforts, as well as in the decision soon to be made by Judge Dillon at Omaha

THE BLACK CLOUD OVER EUROPE.

The reports from the seat of the European war have been of late very favorable to the Russians In Asia they have, by the capture of Kars, secured possession of nearly the whole of Armenia, and the complete investment of Plevna in Europe points to the fall of that important place and the capture of the whole of the large garrison there, with an immense quantity of munitions of war It is true that the Turks are exerting themselves to the utmost to relieve the army in Plevna Conscripts are being gathered together from all points of the compass and hurried off to the front and it is not likely that the place will fall without one of the hottest battles of modern times The sympathies of a large majority of the American people from the breaking out of the war have been with the Russians, and the next three months will probably witness the fruition of their hopes The 'unspeakable Turk,' if left to his own exertions, will be driven out of Europe, if not back to the haunts of his ancestors in Central Asia The Crescent no longer indicates the growing strength of the Mahometan empire, but rather like the old moon, the diminishing power of a Turanic people who have succeeded in maintaining a longer existence upon earth than they have merited

The prospect of Turkish defeat has again engendered a strong anti Russian feeling in England, and there can be but little doubt that the latter nation would at once enter the field as an ally of Turkey if it were not for the incomprehensible attitude of Germany England fears that an understanding exists between Germany and Russia, and hence hesitates to take decided steps in the direction pointed out by her sympathies, and by what she believes her interests England don't want to go to war She would much rather see Turkey the victor through her own efforts, but the governing classes believe that the destruction of Turkey would seriously endanger British interests in India, and they are doubtless right The fall of Plevna, which cannot be much longer delayed, will probably develop a war feeling in England that cannot well be controlled, and it now looks as though the war might involve several other nations before it is brought to a close.

We have elsewhere alluded to the critical condition of affairs in France A great revolution there is not improbable, and when that warlike people get tired of fighting each other as they did in 1793, they may pass the frontiers and, led by another great chieftain like Napoleon, may again stable their horses in the palaces of Europe.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

But for the fact that the Russo-Turkish war attracts all the attention that the busy American people can afford to give to foreign affairs, the condition of things in France would receive some of the attention that its importance deserves. For some time a desperate struggle has been going on between President McMahon and his ministers on the one side, and the Republican leaders on the other. Before the recent election the President resorted to means, almost coercive, to induce the people to vote for conservative candidates for the legislature, but a large majority in that body was secured by the Republicans under the leadership of the eloquent, talented and courageous Gambetta. McMahon does not appear to have profited by the defeat that he sustained, and has since the election manifested a disposition to assume much more power than the law gives him. This has greatly excited the Republican members of the Chamber of Deputies, usually known as the "Left," and about a week since one of their number, M. Grevy, moved the appointment of a committee to investigate the election frauds that the government was accused of perpetrating in order to carry the late election, and strongly hinted at the impossibility of impeaching somebody should the frauds be discovered The introduction of this motion brought the Duc de Broglie to his feet in defense of the government. His speech was an able one, replete with threats. He said that the efforts of the Left to secure the ministry would not succeed, as the President would never appoint a ministry from the Republicans. He said further that the government would not submit to the one-sided inquiry that was proposed. He stated that the bulldozing that were perpetrated at the late election were committed by the Left, which had intimidated the people into voting for its candidates by circulating statements that a Conservative victory meant war. He accused Gambetta of circulating this calumny in German and other foreign papers. He warned the leaders of the Left not to arouse an insurrection which the government would summarily suppress. Gambetta replied to this speech in his usual bold manner. He declared that the speech of the Duc de Broglie formed the best argument for the proposed inquiry, for it showed how determined the government was to resist the will of the people. He characterized as a lie, the statement that the Left had gained a majority by misrepresentation and fraud, but added that at least forty members had been elected by the Right by fraud and robbery. He called the present Ministry insurgents against law, and declared that it would be a serious matter to place the Senate above universal suffrage

This controversy in the Chamber of Deputies created the greatest consternation among the friends of order in Paris, and the gravest forebodings of coming trouble are entertained by many of the most thoughtful persons in France

Since the above was written it is rumored that McMahon's Ministers have resigned, and that their resignations have been accepted. What effect this may have it is as yet difficult to predict It looks like a giving away on the part of the Government

COLORADO IN CONGRESS

Both Judge Belford and Mr Patterson have presented their arguments to the Committee on Elections of the House of Representatives, and the question whether our State shall be represented by one of these gentlemen, or not represented at all for some time to come, is now being considered by that committee If that body were composed of able and upright judges, who were to decide the question upon just and legal grounds, there would to-day be no doubt of the early admission of Judge Belford. But the body is a partisan one, a majority of which are Democrats, who will be much more inclined to be influenced by what they believe to be the interests of their party, than by law or justice We are not surprised to hear, therefore, that the committee stands three in favor of Belford, three in favor of Patterson, and four in favor of declaring neither entitled to a seat, and ordering a new election If the committee could visit Colorado and hear the views of our prominent men of both parties, they would doubtless soon decide in favor of Judge Belford Here every Republican and almost every Democrat knows that the people intended to elect in October a Representative for both the unexpired term in the Forty fourth and for the Forty fifth Congress They had no thought of having to vote again in November, and they all know that Mr Patterson been elected in October, an election in November would never have been heard of It was a dishonorable trick on the part of Patterson and a few of his friends The great mass of the Democratic party and some of their ablest organs are most thoroughly disgusted with the dishonorable action of Patterson in endeavoring to hold his seat in a body to which he was not elected The House of Representatives is so largely Democratic that it is entirely unnecessary for the sake of control to seat this man Patterson, and the partisan action of the Democratic members of the committee which is now considering the matter is shameless

Judge Belford's presentation of his case was masterly When he said, "I am not here, gentlemen, seeking a seat in the American Congress by trick or fraud, nor would I hold one that was secured through the agencies of partisan partiality or necessity,' when he spoke these words, everyone who knows Belford knows that he meant what he said A private letter from Washington informs us that the Judge's candid and honorable way of conducting his case is admired by members of all parties, and is in striking contrast with that of his antagonist

If the people of Colorado are called upon to decide the question again, Judge Belford will go back by a larger majority than Colorado candidates generally receive

RUSSIAN VICTORY

Kars the fortified, Kars the besieged, Kars the impregnable, has fallen, and the following cable dispatch of the 19th describes the gallant attack of the Russians, in which they forced the Turkish stronghold to lower the Crescent

A special dispatch dated at Veran Kaleh Sunday evening, says the fortress and city of Kars, with three hundred cannon, stores, ammunition, etc., fell into Russian hands. The Turks lost 5,000 killed and wounded, 10,000 prisoners and many flags The Russian loss was 2,700 The Russian soldiers made but a trifling booty, and spared the peaceful citizens, women and children. Gen. Kons Melikoff directed the battle during the day. Grand Duke Michael was present also. The former entered the city at 1-10 Sunday morning Kars was captured by about 15,000 Russians, who climbed the steep rocks, ramparts and walls, and stormed an equal number of desperately fighting Turks in headlong flight over their ditches and parapets, compelling them to die or surrender. The escalade had been originally fixed for the 13th, but was postponed owing to the bad weather

The principal attack was made on the southern forts. General Lazereff, who commanded the right wing, consisting of the Fofthet a Division, assaulted Hafiz Pasha in a fort crowning a steep, rocky height. General Count Grabbe, with a regiment of Moscow Grenadiers, and a regiment of the Thirty-ninth Division, attacked Hafiz Pasha in the centre, the Khanjie Tabia, Sauvarri Tabia, the three towers, and the citadel. The Ardahan Brigade and another regiment of Moscow Grenadiers, under Generals Roop and Komuroff, forming the left wing, assaulted Fort Ing is on the north. The attack began in the centre at 8:30 Saturday evening, when Count Grabbe led his brigade against the Khondi redoubt and himself fell dead at the first onset, pierced by a bullet. Captain Kwacmicsi of the 39th regiment was the first to enter a redoubt, at 11 o'clock at night. His sword was cut clean out of his hand, and his clothes pierced. The redoubt surrendered early in the morning, and then the three towers almost simultaneously with the capture of the Karli redoubt. Fort Sauvarri and the fort under Hafiz Pasha were carried by assault. By daylight Sunday, Genera Lazereff's troops had made their progress as far as the capture of Fort Kanclija and the other forts, especially Arb Tabia on the east and Chanak Tabia on the west, maintained a stubborn resistance. Then a the garrison which could escape fled toward Erzeroum, but these were subsequently overtaken by the dragoons and Cossacks and brought back prisoners.

Rev. C. W. Bodgett, now located at Bedford, Iowa, [illegible] a letter to a friend at this place, writes: "We like our new home very well indeed, but no town that I have seen is the equal to your beautiful village."

WHERE THE BULLION AND THE BAGS OF ORE COME FROM.

The citizens of Colorado Springs have examined with interest and curiosity the great masses of bags containing ore, and the rich masses of bar bullion heaped up around our depot, that hourly arrive from the mountains on the west, and each day are carried off by trains to the Eastern markets. The interest felt is one that grows naturally out of the appeal that this trade makes to the pocket of every citizen, because it means additional activity in all branches of our already prosperous trade. It means large returns to the freighters and forwarders, an excellent outlet for supplies to the miners and smelters, greater activity in real estate, demands for new buildings, and good rents for old ones—in short it means a bigger city and a richer one. Many of our citizens have followed up this stream of ore to its source during the last two months, and have returned with tales of mineral wealth so marvelous and of scenery so grand that many others have followed, so that now the resources and wealth of California Gulch and the "Oro District" are known so generally that what we write may seem trite to numbers of our readers, but they must remember that the GAZETTE goes widely among people of other States, who hear but indistinct rumors of this new American Potosi.

Two roads lead us from our depot here to the Oro District, both follow the Ute Pass to the South Park and there divide. The southern route crosses the west rim of the Park by the Trout Creek Pass, which is an easy road over the range, and is so low that it is rarely much obstructed by snow. This is about 135 miles long The other road crosses the South Park further west and rising above timber line reaches Oro by the Weston Pass, about 110 miles It is over this pass that the ores and bullion of the district are now brought. The smelters have made the road good, and in order to get out the rich ores and metal this winter have determined themselves to haul on sleds over the high range to a depot on the east side, and then contract with the teams of the country to bring it down through the Ute Pass to the railway They already have the Bain and Studebaker wagon works employed in making these sleds, and are using what teams they have to establish the depot The Harrison Smelting Works, under the superintendence of Mr. Meyer, are in full operation, are turning out six or seven tons of rich bullion every day, and are piling ores on the bank to supply this and additional furnaces soon to be constructed This smelter is a most excellent one It is of the latest and best construction, made entirely by St Louis machinists, who from their long familiarity with the machinery required for producing lead, have succeeded in making a furnace that seems almost perfect

The ore is so pure that it is shoveled in at the top of the furnace without preparation, and the resulting metal runs out at the bottom into moulds ready to be sent East—solid "rich lead" Only one more process is required to make it ready for the mint, and that is performed in St Louis, at a cost of fifteen dollars per ton

There are sampling works at Oro which grind up the rich ores and prepare them for market The two now at work will not nearly supply the requirements of the miners and one of them is about to double its capacity These works take the rich ores from the miners, grind it fine enough to make an assay, then having determined how much metal there is in the ore by a careful fire test, they buy it and put it into the canvas bags that we see piled up in such masses at our depot. In this form it is ready to go to New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, St Louis, or Omaha, where it is reduced to silver and lead So rich is the yellow, dirty looking material that seems so plenty to the Colorado Spring freighter that much of it could be smelted into bars in a common stove, and often it is so full of the precious metals that a pound would give a dollar's worth of silver and gold

For miles around California, Stray Horse, Evans Empire, Iowa, and other valleys, the "carbonate" that constitutes the bulk of the ore is found There are already 23 mines producing ore for shipment, and one enthusiastic mine owner says he can produce a thousand tons per day if he can get shipment for his ores

The ores lie in a limestone bed, and is like a seam of blackband iron ore or a layer of soft sandstone It crops out on the side of the mountain in belts miles in extent One man has shipped $40,000 worth of ore from a lot of ground about as large as the cellar of a Colorado Springs store. He found the ore at the bottom of a hole less than four feet deep, he put it into sacks and sent it off to the smelter at the rate of five tons per day as a result of his own unaided labor This ore has $70 worth of metal in it when delivered in St Louis. He can go into his mine now and at any time scrape out with a fire-shovel or a sugar scoop $100 worth of ore in an hour. He keeps, naturally enough, a lock on the door of the drift. Another miner has sunk four shafts and developed an acre of his property, upon which he believes from measurements that he has over $1,500,000 worth of 100-oz. ore. Another miner has taken out 1,400 tons from his shafts and is increasing his force. Another is selling a little ore to keep himself going, and piling up in his mine to await the opening of spring.

Quantities of ore which $50 to $100 worth of metal in it are being produced at $5 per ton. This low cost will force a great deal out this winter in spite of snows and the road running over a summit 10,600 feet above the sea. More than 300 mules will be employed in this transportation alone.

The belief of the people of the gulch, which is shared in by experts who have been through the mines, is that the quantity of lead ore, with from 20 to 50 ounces of silver and 20 to 30 per cent. of lead in it, is practically inexhaustible. Like the Eureka mines of Nevada, that have yielded $40,000,000 worth of silver and lead, the seams of ore appear to be rich and continuous as they go down, and the ores are similar and are in a similar geological formation to those of the Nevada deposit.

We learn that several parties are proposing to put up smelting works in the early spring, and this already very valuable source of trade will then be greatly increased. Indeed it would seem that the bullion business, which has made so many fortunes in Utah and Nevada, is about to become one of our most important sources of wealth, and this seems to be the conviction of such capitalists as Edwin Harrison, the great ex-master of St. Louis, and Mr. Ecker, of the house of Fleischmann & Ecker, of Chicago, for they have been personally examining the Leadville and have invested largely in them.

The passenger depot has been undergoing some repairs the past week, a large new depot will be built [illegible] grounds would be an ornament to the town and a good advertising card.

Mr Peck, the merchant tailor on Pikes Peak Street has largely increased his stock of goods, and is now on hand one of the finest assortment of pantaloon goods, suitings, worsted goods, and overcoatings ever brought into town

As certain weather fools in to our stockmen they become more and more aesthetic and esthetical in their tastes urge Ranchmen employs a French cook to dish up savory viands for his cowpunchers, and when not [illegible] he goes beautiful pictures in water colors, upon which the heifers cast their critical eyes in a manner that would do credit to a frequenter of an art gallery

Our Military Company is fast improving in discipline and drill, and will soon be referred to by our people as one of the ornaments of the town. The Omaha Board of Trade excursion went south over the D. & R. In addition to the increased amount of building going on, there seems to be a general remodeling of the town in regard to the position of the houses already built Not a day passes but one or more houses 'on wheels' are seen trundling along our broad smooth streets on their way to some more favored locality, where their value will be increased Mr S. E Sessions seems to be in charge of most of the moving business

No class of our business men have been more prompt to meet the requirements of the times by a lavish expenditure of money to keep up their stocks than our livery men The most notable addition in this line lately has been made by Mr. S. M. Sanders, who has imported seventeen fine horses from Illinois. They were selected for him by his father in-law, Mr. J. H. Mather, of Wheaton, who exercised the greatest care in buying them, and it is safe to say there is not a poor horse in the lot Among them are a span of bays and a span of Cleveland mares, also bays, that would attract attention in any city by their fine appearance and elegant action. They are a little too good for the arduous duties of a livery horse, we think.

One evening this week, as one of our county officers was relaxing the tension on his brain tissue by a game of ten pins, some heartless scoundrels filled a monstrous sponge with ice water and placed it in the gentleman's chair. He unwittingly sat down upon it, but immediately "arose as one man." The unfortunate man was at once placed "under treatment," and is rapidly recovering, but the sponge is ruined for life. A reward is offered for the perpetrator, dead or alive.

THE KELLOGG-CARY CONCERTS

The Kellogg and Cary concerts at Denver on Monday and Tuesday evenings of this week were musical events of uncommon interest in this section, and gave great delight to those who were so fortunate as to attend them. Quite a number of our citizens went up on Monday and were present on Tuesday evening. The disappointment at not hearing Miss Cary was compensated by the excellent singing of Miss Kellogg and the gentlemen of the party, who seemed to feel that unusual responsibilities were cast upon them, and to be fully equal to the occasion, and all manifestation of regret was hushed by the consideration that one so greatly admired as an artist was suddenly prostrated by illness, and suffering pain.

Our people who were in attendance came home entirely satisfied with the entertainment. They are loud in their praise of the musical performance. They represent the audience, most, of course, Denver people, as presenting a fine appearance in their attire, manner and personal attractions, comparing favorably with similar gatherings in Eastern cities. The Tourners Hall was commodious and every way comfortable, although filled to its full capacity. Much praise is awarded Mr. Cofield on all hands for the excellence of the appointments and accommodations, and especially for the energy and enterprise which has enabled Coloradians to enjoy a rare treat at home, in this visit of the accomplished and world renowned vocalists, who have afforded so much pleasure and public satisfaction.

THE TEMPERANCE MEETINGS.

The gospel temperance meetings inaugurated by the pastors of the churches commenced Tuesday evening, Rev. Mr. Cross, chairman of the first meeting, the motto being "With malice toward none and charity to all." Rev. Mr. Brisco offered prayer, after which the Rev. A. Stayt gave the opening address. His speech was limited to 15 minutes, but his words were well chosen. The substance was, first: Although there were to be no denunciations, we must know the strength and the character of our enemy in order to rout him. Our enemy has his forces we organized; he has his brewers' league his distillers' league, etc. He is stronger financially than we; while we give money and time to the work, he is as ready as we, and more vigilant; we cannot fight the battle without the help of God, and in His strength we are going into the conflict.

Rev. Mr. Nobles and wife, the champion temperance workers of New Jersey, who were here but for a day, were pressed into service, and gave many incidents in regard to the universal interest just now being seen and the prospects of an advance on the enemy's works. They have been working canvassing the State of New Jersey, and speak of the success there.

Revs. Mr. Gage and Noble offered prayer. Singing was interspersed, the pledge was read, and several persons gave their names.

The next meeting was announced for Friday evening. The hall was about half filled, and the outlook was better than anticipated.

Louis Goeltz, one of the editors of the Hudson Republican, of Hudson, N. Y., died at Colorado Springs, whither he had gone for his health, last week. Mr. Goeltz's parents were Polish exiles, and settled at Chester, Pa., where Louis was born about 1842. At the breaking out of the rebellion he entered the United States Navy and served with distinction until the close of the war. He then resigned and entered mercantile life. About 1867, when the Department of Charities and Correction organized the school ship Mercury, the position of paymaster was tendered to Mr. Goeltz, which he accepted, and the success of this institution was greatly due to his untiring labor and executive abilities. He resigned in 1871 and began his journalistic career. By his industry, temperance, and honorable dealings he won for himself an enviable reputation.—N. Y. Graphic.

A VOICE FROM MISSOURI.

MARSHFIELD, Mo., Nov. 20, 1877.

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

To write a letter worthy of appearing in any newspaper, and especially the GAZETTE, I feel incompetent, but my great desire to see Colorado Springs continue in its present prosperous condition impels me to ask a small space in your excellent paper that I may contribute a mite to that end.

The contrast between Colorado Springs and towns in Kansas and Missouri through which I recently passed is so striking, so decidedly in favor of the former, that I am led to the conclusion that its prosperity depends more upon local than general causes. It is true Colorado Springs has important natural advantages, such as healthful climate, splendid location, beautiful scenery, etc., but its present prosperous condition is owing in a great degree, I think, to the experience and wisdom of its founders, as well as to the moral, temperate, intelligent, and public spirited character of its present population.

In business we see it equal, if not in advance of most towns of its age or even more mature years. In church and school privileges it is certainly ahead of any town of its size within my knowledge. Its beautiful streets and sidewalks together with the general cleanliness of the town, are an honor to its people, and exceedingly attractive to strangers, all of which betokens a state of prosperity, morality, education, and public spirit, not manifested in any other towns that have come under my observation. In fact, a majority of the towns in Kansas and Missouri that I have visited, and passed through seem to be in a neglected condition; churches and school houses unpainted, broken boards and hog-wallows in the sidewalks, while the alleys are filled with all kinds of rubbish.

Eighteen years ago I lived in a town of about two thousand inhabitants, in which there were four prosperous church organizations, all occupying their own houses of worship, with well paid pastors, and services twice every Sabbath, good schools, and an industrious, frugal people, and not a dram-shop inside the corporate limits of the town. At the close of the rebellion, upon the re-establishing of the civil and municipal government of the town dram-shops were licensed. Now the same town is said to contain about nine thousand inhabitants, with the same church houses and no more, with but a little if any larger membership, pastors not as well paid as then, schools improved but little, a frightful depreciation of property, and a greatly increased proportion of insolvent men, and the general appearance of the town that of carelessness and neglect. Half a dozen or more licensed dram-shops and houses of ill-fame are among the "improvements" of the place.

The controlling element of this town is reach by discernible.

Seven years since I knew of a town of about six or eight hundred inhabitants, business good, fair schools, three church organizations, one new church house with a debt of about $400 on it, services twice every Sabbath at the church, and occasional preaching at other places in the town, with good congregations, and not a licensed saloon in the county. About five years ago the County Court granted dram-shops licenses; immediately several saloons opened in town. Since then the church house has been sold for debt, preaching in town for the last few years has not averaged once a month, in fact, the church clock has been still for months at a time; women of the worst type took up their abode on some of the main streets. Neither business nor population has increased. Children are kept in school elsewhere because of the bad influences surrounding them at home, while their parents, in addition to the extra expense of board and tuition, pay a school tax of two per cent per annum.

Is it unreasonable, then, to conclude that the industrious, frugal, moral, and public spirited character of the citizens of Colorado Springs is owing in a pre-eminent degree to its prohibition of the free sale of intoxicating liquors? Certainly not. Prohibition attracts that class and none others. Good men who drink a dram occasionally prefer to have their children reared and educated in such a community. In the hands and under the control of such a people, a town is sure to be prosperous; attractive homes are made, churches and school houses are built (and occupied, too), streets and sidewalks are kept in good condition. Now, on the other hand, what class of people do dram-shops attract? Just the reverse. Could nice results be expected from a people totally different in spirit as well as practice? Certainly not. Would a town revenue, let it be derived from what it may, be safe in their hands? Oh, it is said, the better class will control that. I say it will not; the better class becomes disheartened and disgusted, as in the towns of which I have made particular mention. They prefer to emigrate to a place where at least the front doors to vice and immorality are closed. All the possible revenue that can be derived from licensing vice, crime, corruption, stupidity, prostitution, ignorance, delirium tremens, etc., etc., will not repay to a town the loss of its best citizens. Besides, money in the hands of an element fostering such a state of things is not likely to be experienced in an economical way for the best interests of the people. "Where there is no will there is no way" is as true as it is old.

To the good people of Colorado Springs I would say, "Hold the fort." Your beautiful town was never intended to be polluted with the foul effusions of whisky saloons. The frightfully contagious disease of this country, delirium tremens, should never be allowed a subject within its limits.

Once or twice I have attended in my advocacy of prohibition, but recent observation teaches me it is the best policy in all respects, and I now dedicate myself anew to prohibition of the free sale of intoxicating liquors, first, last, and all the time. That it does not absolutely control and prohibit the sale and use of intoxicating liquors in a place is no argument against it. Enough is accomplished to make a success.

The tax levy in Custer County is 30 mills on the dollar, which, on the assessed valuation of property in the county, will yield $17,033 24

Ouray is just nineteen miles distant from Lake City in a direct line, and is one mile south of a line running directly west from that place.—Times

Mr. Curtis of West Plum Creek has sold his ranch for twelve thousand dollars. The above gives an idea of what real estate is worth in Douglas County.—News

The Fairplay Sentinel says placer miners along the Upper Arkansas are meeting with good success. The clean ups range from $1 75 to one half ounce per day in gold with the "rocker."

Six unoccupied stage coaches are to be drawn off the line between here and Del Norte and a buck board, large enough to carry four passengers, put in their place until this ring.—Silver World

The La Plata Miner chronicles the discovery of a gold mine near Silverton by Mr. Roberts that is very rich. Messrs. Greene & Co. paid the discoverer $500 in cash for one third interest and fifteen yards of the ore.

Several days of two weeks since we caught some of the West Mountain farmers unprepared. Many potatoes are not dug yet and cannot be. One man in that locality loses $1,000 bushels at least.—Alamosa

The editor of the Boulder News estimates the yield of the wheat crop in Boulder County this year at 750,000 bushels and with no preventing Providence next year's harvest will be no less than a million bushels

The Denver Temperance Association has filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State. The capital stock is $25,000, divided into shares of $10 each. The object is to erect a building for the purpose of furthering temperance

Mr. Hayden, says the Boulder News, has made 16,852 pounds of cheese this season at Valmont—a short season, as he began late. He has used 161,000 pounds of milk, and it has taken an average of 9½ pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese

The Kansas City Journal of recent date says: There has been a heavy trade in Colorado cattle for a few days past at the stock yards, the greater portion of which are going to the country to be corn fed. The finest cattle that come into the yards are from Colorado

Society buries from the bottom, and so does the cause of popular liberty and personal rights. The tailors and printers of Denver have overcome their prejudice against women as co workers and members of their unions, but the college educated physicians of the city refuse to be equally just. Of course they can give good reasons. The "divine right of kings" and African slavery did not weaken or perish for want of logic so called.—Denver Democrat.

A correspondent of the Chieftain, writing from Silverton, says Greene & Co have made a success run it is season, having turned out over four hundred tons of base bullion, averaging about two hundred and forty ounces of silver to the ton. Speaking of this company, great credit is due them for developing the country, as it has been done under adverse circumstances, and nothing but business ability and vim, with a firm faith in the mineral resources of the country, coupled with undaunted pluck, have placed them over the shoals. They are now on a firm business footing with yearly increasing revenue

It so happened that during the session of the Congregational Association, held in Denver, that the Rev. Dr. Bliss, who made himself so notorious as an opponent of woman's suffrage during the late campaign, was present when an intelligent and cultivated Canadian lady, a Mrs. Lawson, arose to read an address she had prepared on woman's work in the church. She immediately got up and left the room. We suppose Dr. Bliss ever gets to heaven and should there find a woman going to address the throne, he will immediately fly aside his angel wings, present a pass to St. Peter at the gate and—[illegible] we guess; will he [illegible] that other place?—Colorado Miner.

At the meeting of the Denver Medical society last week Dr. Alice C. Avery made application for membership. Action was indefinitely postponed in the matter.

Mail from Lake City to Ouray will now go through in two days instead of two weeks or thereabouts as formerly. This is a great improvement, and will be especially realized by the citizens of Ouray.—Avalanche.

Saguache County is not prolific in suits. At the term of the district court just closed the petit jury was not sworn in at all—not a case was tried by jury. Several cases were disposed of on motion. One civil case and one arceny were continued. The grand jury found four or five indictments, all of which we believe were larceny cases, but as none of the parties were within reach of the sheriff, the cases did not come up. Last year there was no jury trial. Two years ago only one case was tried by jury that belonged to this county.—Chronicle

THE COLORADO CENTRAL.

At last the citizens of Longmont view with satisfaction through trains with palace sleepers, and ponderous freight cars thundering by. For nearly five years there has been a gap of seventy-five miles—it has been filled—the "missing link" has been found and placed in position

The Colorado Central, from this time forward, will be of greater benefit to all branches of industry in our State than any other railroad within its borders. It will not stop with its present development, but will move into South Park and on through the great mining regions of Southwestern Colorado, stimulate mining, and become of incalculable benefit by assisting in the development of that country so full of resource. It will enable the farmers of Northern Colorado to compete with their grain, flour, and other productions in Wyoming and also the great mines in the San Juan Country.—Longmont Press

BEET ROOT CULTIVATION.

It is claimed by the Watsonville Pajaronian that the 210 acres of sugar beets planted in the Pajaro Valley last March have yielded 3,150 tons, or an average of 15 tons to the acre, worth, at the price received, $4 75 a ton, $14,962 50. Seeds, seed and machinery for planting being a furnished by the company, the expense per acre for planting, harvesting, etc., will it is thought, not exceed $15, leaving a clear profit of $55 25 per acre. In a good season the profits to the farmer will of course be greater. This is a fine result. Beet growing and beet sugar making are great industries in France, the product reaching millions in value annually. The establishment of this industry in Pajaro Valley has been frequently advocated by the Record. It says the valley has more than 10,000 acres that is capable of producing a first quality of sugar beet. Wood is plenty, soil strong, fancy and cheap, and why can not some inducements be held out to capitalists to establish works at home?"—Santa Barbara Press

HALL HAND FIRE ENGINE AND HOSE CARRIAGE.

IMPROVED HAND FIRE ENGINE AND HOSE CARRIAGE.

In the accompanying engravings we illustrate an improved hand fire engine and hose carriage combined, which has been especially constructed with a view to meeting the requirements of towns and villages and isolated factories which do not afford the facilities of steam or the advantages to be derived from a system of waterworks. Hand engines, as usually constructed, require a large gang of men to operate them, making them comparatively useless in localities where 40 or 50 men cannot be assembled at a moment's notice.

The engine herewith represented we are informed, can be operated by from two to fourteen men, according to the amount of water and the distance the stream has to be thrown. Two men can readily draw it over a common grade. At present the manufacturers are building one size only, the entire equipment weighing only 500 pounds, the hose reel having capacity for 800 feet of one and a half inch hose.

In readiness for fire, the engine is always mounted on the carriage, as shown in Fig. 1, while Fig. 2 shows the engine as detached from the hose carriage, with leading hose run out. Upon an alarm of fire being given, the first man or two at the engine house starts for the scene of action with the machine. Upon arrival the engine is disconnected from the carriage or hose reel, by simply turning three clamp fingers, which drop into hooks, at A. Two men then lift the engine from the carriage, it weighing alone only 325 pounds, by the handles, B, setting it upon its own ways, C, as shown in Fig 2, leaving the hose carriage ready to unreel the hose. The hose being always coupled to the engine, no time is lost, as the first sweep of the brakes, after the suction, D, is dropped into the water, starts the stream. The engine is so light that it can be freed and set over a well, cistern, or reservoir. It really needs no priming, although a priming bucket is provided, at E, leading by a stop-cock into the side running from the suction to the cylinder. This would prove advantageous should the valves, through non-use, become dry. The engine has, of course, two cylinders, the diameter of each being four inches, the throw being six inches, thus giving a powerful stroke, the brakes moving through a circle of two feet nine inches.

Both air chambers and water chambers are copper and the valves are composition. The pinion wheels are 36 inches high, the forward ones being 32 inches, and the after swing under the reel, allowing the machine to be turned in its own length. Five feet of two and a half inch suction hose are provided, with which are used one and a half inch leading hose with half inch nozzle.

In a trial at the manufactory the following result was obtained:

Two men on brakes threw 97 feet horizontally, 62 feet perpendicularly; four men on brakes threw 120 feet horizontally, 85 feet perpendicularly; six men on brakes threw 143 feet horizontally, 98 feet perpendicularly. This range of stream is, as will be seen, sufficient to enable fires on roofs to be extinguished by the machine stationed on the ground.

The makers furnish the apparatus with twelve feet of suction hose, brass strainer, draw rope, spanners for suction and leading hose couplings, two fire buckets, oil can, etc. The complete machine, in readiness for the application of leading hose, is sold for $350 at their manufactory.

Individuals, companies, or towns can order the above machine through this office.
